The Office des professions du Québec is proposing that universities be permitted to grant degrees giving direct access to professions in the province.

If the proposal is accepted, professional corporations in the province will be stripped of their right to impose extra examinations and courses on university graduates before granting them admission to professions.

The proposal was discussed at an open meeting at McGill last week, attended by Office President André Desgagné and Office staff member Démétrius Michailidis.

The Office des professions believes there are too many steps imposed on students who want to enter a profession after graduating from the required university program, according to Desgagné.

The Office considers that many of the extra conditions imposed by professional corporations duplicate material covered in university, and are therefore "unnecessarily expensive to the public, and onerous to the student."

Desgagné told the meeting that the current situation was like "two solitudes."

On the one hand, universities grant degrees and provide the bulk of the "formation de base," or basic education, necessary for the professions.

On the other hand, professional bodies grant government-recognized licences or diplomas to practice in the province. Additional courses, exams and stages (apprenticeships such as articling or interning) are routinely required before licences or diplomas are awarded to students.

The Office considers supplemental conditions imposed by the various professional corporations to be an "unwarranted lack of confidence" in the education provided by universities in the province.

Therefore, the Office des professions will recommend to Education Minister Camille Laurin that universities be made responsible for the entire basic education of professions.

"The power to impose extra examinations and courses will be withdrawn from the professional corporations," Michailidis said.

Professional degrees granted by universities would be recognized by the government as the only diplomas necessary to practice the respective professions.

"Stages may continue to be required by professional bodies, but only as a means of initiating new graduates into the profession, not as part of the basic education," Michailidis added.

The Office spokespersons told the audience that if the proposal is enacted, there will be a transition period during which professional corporations will meet with each university to negotiate curriculum and evaluation procedures acceptable to both. Universities would then administer both curriculum and evaluation alone.

If a professional body and a university cannot agree, each will report within six months to the Minister of Education, who will impose a solution on the university.

Subsequently, professional corporations will monitor university programs to ensure agreed courses and examinations are being given.

If a corporation detects a gap in the program offered by a university, it will be able to write to the Minister, who will investigate and, if warranted, warn the university that its program is unsatisfactory.

"In case the university refuses or fails to comply with the Minister's warning, the recognition of the university's degree as a professional diploma will be withdrawn," Michailidis said.

During the question period, one student expressed concern about the "Sword of Damocles" which would be held over the universities under this new system. Michailidis responded that this was not to be feared as the "Sword" was to be held by the Minister, for the protection of the public, and not by the professional corporation.

Manley blasts the multinationals

by Chris Cavanagh

The Third World can only survive by promoting economic cooperation within itself, former Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley said at McGill Friday.

"We in the South have a responsibility to create our own productive system by international cooperation," said Manley.

Manley talked of a project he initiated to take Jamaican bauxite and marry it to Mexican, Algerian and Iraqi natural gas for aluminum smelting. Manley's defeat scuttled the project, but not irrevocably. "I intend to resume working on it as soon as my opportunity comes around again," he said.

Manley continued: "The political independence of the Third World is new but solves no problems in that it has come to independence with all the structural weaknesses that were historically created."

He assessed the impact of multinationals on Third World problems: "Here you have a company that is impelled by the logic of its own processes to maximize profit with no other consideration involved," he said.

During the question period Manley responded to a question on the legalisation by claiming that 75 per cent of Jamaicans are opposed to legalization. He said "dealers" are the major obstacle to legalization because it would force them out of business.

In response to a question on why Jamaica's holdings of foreign exchange were depleted under his rule, Manley said Jamaica has never had a healthy level of foreign exchange. The depletion was the result of increases in OPEC prices and contractions in the tourist and bauxite industries concomitant with the world recession and structurally dependent economy, he said.

"A great number of factors coincided to move against Jamaica in terms of both trade and foreign exchange," he said.

In response to a question on relations with Cuba during his term, Manley said Jamaica had also had relations with Mexico and Venezuela, but that the press singled out Cuba.

"I believe it the inalienable right of small peoples to pursue their own paths without interference from the major powers," Manley said.

Senate reviews budget report; is not entirely impressed

by Peter Findlay

McGill's precarious financial situation was once again the source of debate at last week's Senate meeting.

Presenting the 1981-82 Budget Task Force Report to Senate, Principal David Johnston outlined the problems facing McGill in this and upcoming years.

"Our dilemma is underfunding for all Canadian universities, which means that governments are not giving universities the priority that they once had," said Johnston.

Describing the report as an effort to "inform the rest of the community so that everyone can participate in the establishment of priorities," Johnston stressed his belief that McGill must tighten its belt to keep up with cutbacks in educational funding.

"I'm afraid that we have not been rigorous enough in reviewing our teaching and research quality and we must also look very seriously at the type of deficit financing that we have undertaken," he said.

Professor Harris of the Department of Engineering, however, was less than enthusiastic about the prospects for maintaining quality in the face of decreased funding.

"We can make all the pious comments that we want about maintaining excellence, but I find myself in a state of complete disbelief," he said.

"The budget of my department is already only 53 per cent of the Quebec average and now I'm supposed to cut it down again (to meet the new budget limitations)."

Commenting on the recommendations put forth by the Task Force, Harris said, "although the Task Force has come up with a number of ways of saving money, it has not addressed the most important question in front of us."

"We're going to come out extremely diminished and that's a fact so we have to decide what we want to keep and what we want to cut."

When questioned about the possibility of tuition increases for next year, Johnston said that the provincial government had yet to respond to McGill's inquiries.

"We have raised the question of tuition fee increases with the (provincial) Department of Education and as of now we have had no response other than that it is a 'political matter'."

"I must confess to being somewhat frustrated that an issue of such importance has not been discussed with those people that would be most directly affected by such a proposal," he said.

The Task Force Report was sent to the Senate Steering Committee for further consideration.

In other Senate business, a Force over the question of staff salary policy.

"Staff at McGill are very loyal to the University. They understand its problems and are willing to help solve them. They are not prepared to be run over by a steamroller, nor should they be," McVety said.

McVety is a member of the McGill University Non-Academic Staff Association (MUNASA), and a representative to the Non-Academic Salary Policy Committee. He has a long history of involvement with MUNASA.

"Basically they (the University) are telling the staff to unionize," said McVety, adding the belief that a unionization drive among the non-academic staff was "very possible."

McVety explained the recommendations of the Budget Task Force and his dissent from its proposals regarding non-academic staff policy.

"The Task Force recommendation is that there should be

Thousands protest education cutbacks

Ottawa (CUP) — About 4,000 students confronted Secretary of State Gerald Regan on the steps of Parliament October 29, demanding an end to cabinet plans that, they say, will reduce funding to post-secondary education drastically.

Students from Carleton University, Algonquin College and the University of Ottawa marched through city streets shouting, "No way, we won't pay!" They stopped on the Parliament lawns, and were addressed by Regan, Conservative house leader Walter Baker and Bill Blaikie, NDP education critic.

Regan said he has "no knowledge" of the planned cutbacks, telling students in a letter distributed at the rally that "some may say that the Federal Government plans to drastically reduce its support for post-secondary education. This is simply not true."

He blamed the provincial governments' shrinking role in funding education as the cause of federal concern. Regan said the federal government intends to continue "doing its part to support post-secondary education."

He was shouted down by chants of "bullshit, bullshit..." from the angry students.

PC house leader Baker condemned the minister's statement that no cutbacks would be made. "The government of Canada wants to take $1.5 billion off the Established Programs Financing. They want to do it in the face of the unanimous decision of a committee of the Parliament of Canada made up of not just Progressive Conservatives, not just New Democrats, but of Liberal members of parliament who said it couldn't be done."

Baker, too, was interrupted by students who cried, "What about Davis?" referring to the track record of the Ontario provincial government in post-secondary education.

Bill Blaikie, MP for Winnipeg-Bird's Hill, attacked the government's proposed cuts in education financing while doling out generous tax concessions to corporations. He said Liberal criticism of the mismanagement of money given to provinces was no excuse for federal cutbacks. "They might have some basis for questioning the provincial funding commitments to these programs, but two wrongs don't make a right and that's no reason for them to begin their own program of cutbacks."

Student leaders from the three institutions had met with government representatives earlier in the day. Steve May, vice-president of the Carleton University Student Association said "we were disappointed. We never got a clear statement on what they wanted to see in post-secondary education."

"Both levels of government don't see education as a priority."

John Alphonse, president of the Algonquin College student union, said government cuts are meeting with student "indignation", and the students are getting positive community support in their fight.

Regan later told a press conference that student fears were "groundless". He said he was confident that "massive" cutbacks in funding will not be featured in the November 12 federal budget, but the minister would not promise a budget with no reductions at all. He said students must wait until the budget is presented.

Regan hinted that cutback "rumors" may have started within the Progressive Conservative party.

The protest was organized as part of a province-wide day of protest on university funding, spearheaded by the Ontario Federation of Students. OFS says any reduction in funding to colleges would limit the access of lower income students to higher education. They fear what could prove to be doubled tuition costs and disruptions in services on their campuses.

Extra RCMP officers had been placed at the House of Commons entrance during the demonstration, though no incidents took place. The RCMP said they estimated 4,000 students took part in the rally.

March: "Hell no, we won't glow!"

by Moira Ambrose

"Two-four-six-eight! We don't want to radiate! was the chant at the peace march held yesterday as the finale of Disarmament Week.

The march, organized by Project Ploughshares and World Religions for Peace, was attended by more than forty people from the McGill Newman Center and fifty others from religious and political organizations around Montreal.

Starting at one o'clock from Parc La Fontaine and Westmount Park the two groups joined together to parade down St. Catherine Street.

RAEU executive quits in protest

by Wendy Jones

Citing irreconcilable political differences with the other executive members of the Regroupement des Associations Etudiantes Universitaires (RAEU), Marjie Tyroler has resigned her position as secrétaire aux affaires internes (see letter page 11).

Tyroler, a French literature student at McGill, was serving out her second term on RAEU's executive, which would have ended in February. A former McGill representative to RAEU, Tyroler was removed from the delegation last year when she left to study at Laval for a semester. Tyroler was subsequently elected to the organization's executive committee, the members of which do not represent individual student associations.

"I'm not against RAEU," said Tyroler, "I'm against the attitude of the (RAEU) executive." Tyroler claims the executive has attempted to "marginalize dissidence" within RAEU.

"The executive has no right to take one side or another," she said. "They are elected as individuals, not on a platform. They should be neutral."

Tyroler believes that some of the student associations who are members of RAEU have been treated unfairly by the executive.

"Even if they are the craziest organization in the world, the executive has no right to isolate them," she said.

Although Tyroler presented her letter of resignation on Oct. 24, it has not yet been officially accepted by RAEU because the meeting that evening broke quorum when the McGill and Laval delegations walked out. Tyroler is unsure whether RAEU will be able to maintain quorum for subsequent meetings.

As another reason for her resignation, Tyroler claims she wasn't able to voice her opinions. Because the executive committee has a policy of maintaining solidarity within its ranks, Tyroler was not allowed to dissent during meetings of the entire organization.

"I've had a year of not being able to say what I want to say," said Tyroler. Within the executive committee, Tyroler claims they tried to isolate her. "They were so distrustful of me that they didn't give me anything to work on," she said.

Tyroler stressed the viability of RAEU and its importance to students, particularly at a time of rampant education cutbacks. "It's an organization that I believe in. We need RAEU, we can't destroy it," she said. "But RAEU needs to take a unified stand."

chanting, "La guerre nucléaire, ce n'est pas mon affaire" with signs that read "Hell no, we won't glow!"

Marchers were joined by the honks of motorcycles and the cheers of store-owners. The cheers turned to jeers when the marchers passed a sign that read "Imbattable — la vie dans les forces."

The demonstration culminated in an inter-faith ceremony held at Mary Queen of the World Cathedral. Religions represented in the ceremony included Buddhism, Catholicism, Protestantism, Hinduism, Judaism, Caghnawaga Indian, Islam, Sikh, Unitarian and Zoroastrian.

As a symbolic gesture of unity for peace, each religious representative lit a candle and put a flower in a common vase.

The children of Montreal were also represented at the service by The Children for Peace, a group of children who presented a dramatization of what effects war, violence and hatred can have on youth.

The representatives at the service, each in his or her own language, promised that the struggle for peace would not end until world peace had been achieved.

Montrealers march for the liberation of Central America

by Richard Flint

Nearly a thousand people marched from Jeanne Mance Park to Place Desjardins this Saturday to protest American intervention in Central America.

The demonstration was sponsored by the Montreal Salvador committee, the Nicaraguan Work Brigade (who have recently returned from Nicaragua), various Guatemalan and Central American solidarity groups and a number of political groupings.

"The demonstration has been called to protest the increasing level of U.S. military aid in the Central American region, and also to bring pressure on the Canadian government to break with the present support for Reagan's policies in the region and follow the lead of Mexico and France in recognizing the FDR-FMLN (the alliance of groups in Salvador fighting the junta) as the political representative of the Salvadorean people," said Michael Mill, member of the Montreal Salvador committee.

"Last year there was a lot of talk about U.S. involvement in the region because Haig and Reagan were talking about it," Mill said. "This year they aren't talking about it and neither is the media."

"In fact," Mill said, "military aid from the U.S. government has increased considerably even though the media and U.S. government are silent. Last year the U.S. government gave about $100 million in military aid. This year the figure has doubled to nearly $200 million."

"Only one-third of this aid is going to the Salvadorean junta," Mill said. "There are major joint military operations being scheduled at the moment between the U.S. military and the Honduran dictatorship in the Fonseca Gulf."

"Military relations have been restored between the U.S. and the Guatemalan regime. Aid is being given to approximately 5,000 of Nicaragua's ex-dictator's civil guards. They are armed with U.S. rifles and ammunition. There are daily incursions into Nicaragua by these men," he said.

The demonstration organizers felt that there is a pressing need for greater public awareness regarding the situation in Central America.

"Just because the media seems to be pretending that nothing is happening," said Mill. "A lot of people think that all is well in Central America."

"But the truth is that the U.S. government is becoming more and more committed to military assistance for dictators in the region. The resemblances to the early days of U.S. involvement in Indochina become stronger every day."

McGill daycare set to expand

by Robert Chartrand

During its budget cutting session last July, the Quebec government decided to shut down the expansion of daycare centers; but the ensuing pressure from social interest groups has caused the government to reverse its decision, to the benefit of McGill's daycare facilities.

The McGill Community Family Centre (MCFC) has been working for over a year to get expanded facilities. The University had just granted it approval for the space when the government announced its budget cuts. MCFC Director Marilyn Neuman voiced deep concern over the matter and appealed to Margaret De Serres from the Ministry of Social Affairs for help.

"She urged us to fight the government by writing to our MNA and pressing the government for help," Neuman said.

The government subsidizes most daycare centres on the basis of the number of children enrolled. Depending on the parent's income and age of child, the government gives financial help to the parents and to the centres. Thus expanding daycare facilities means subsidizing more children and an added burden on the provincial budget.

The expansion of the MCFC will mean an additional 27 children to the 40 already present, but as Neuman said, "There are about 200 children on a waiting list and the expansion will only relieve a small part of that list." For example, a two-year-old child who is put on the waiting list today, will probably not be accepted at the MCFC before the child reaches kindergarten age. It is even suggested that the child be placed on the waiting list when the mother is still pregnant.

As to the financing of the renovations, Neuman does not yet know how they will raise the money. The MCFC expects to move into the expanded facilities next door at 3487 Peel Street, in

At the MCFC, much emphasis is placed on parent participation, especially with the very young. Parents are encouraged to come in with their children and spend some time with them, painting, making doll clothes or sharing a musical talent so that both the child and parent feel comfortable in the environment.

April or next September. The renovations are not major, mainly added safety measures for the children and compliance with fire regulations changes.

With the additional children at the center the MCFC will have to add about six new staff members. As a university daycare facility, it provides an opportunity for students in education, psychology, nursing and other faculties to gain practical experience with children.

Innovators . Creators . Achievers

Consider this record:

- 1889 - One small factory and 11 employees in Clermont-Ferrand, France.
- 1891 - Michelin invented the first detachable pneumatic tire (bicycle).
- 1898 - Michelin logo "Bibendum", The Michelin Man, introduced.
- 1906 - Michelin invented the first removable passenger car tire rim and the concept of the inflatable spare tire.
- 1923 - Michelin introduced the first low pressure passenger car tire with an unheard of tire life of nearly 10,000 miles.
- 1929 - Michelin introduced the world's first rubber tire for railroad cars (now Montreal, Paris, Mexico City, among others, use them for their subway systems).
- 1934 - Michelin introduced the Zig-Zag tread design to help prevent skids.
- 1939 - Michelin introduced the "Metallic Tire" incorporating the use of superior steel wire fabric. This breakthrough gave Michelin a leadership in tire technology which has never been relinquished.
- 1948 - Michelin introduced the steelbelted "X" radial passenger car tire, invented by Michelin engineers in 1946. It would be 15 years before any other tire manufacturer marketed a radial tire.
- 1965 - Michelin introduced the "XAS" asymmetric tire which introduced the steel-belted radial to the world of high speed competition sports cars.
- 1971 - Michelin produced its first steel-belted radial tire "Made in Canada".
- 1977 - Michelin developed the latest generation of high performance steel-belted radial tires, the "TRX". Included in the "TRX" were dramatic engineering concepts improving safety, handling, comfort, mileage and tire life.
- 1981 - Michelin expands existing manufacturing facilities at Granton and Bridgewater, Nova Scotia and commences construction of another modern plant at Waterville, Nova Scotia in preparation for the demands of the 80's.

UBC profs take shots at "Canadian first" hiring policy

Vancouver (CUP) — A group of professors at the University of British Columbia, fighting a new "Canadian first" hiring policy for faculties, claim the quality of education for students will be jeopardized if the regulation is enforced.

Federal employment and immigration minister Lloyd Axworthy announced the regulations in July, intending to force universities to consider Canadian candidates for vacant posts before looking at other applications. Every Canadian candidate must now be rejected for a lack of qualifications before any foreign academics can be considered.

And if no suitable Canadian is found the university must provide Employment and Immigration Canada with a file of evidence documenting the recruitment work before it gets permission to hire a foreign academic.

A letter to Axworthy opposing the rules has been signed by all but two members of UBC's economics department. The department is now asking other faculties to follow their lead.

"The new regulations are giving nationality a higher priority and general excellence a lower priority," said economics professor Anthony Scott. "It's a worthy thing for Axworthy to be concerned about, but finding Canadian jobs is not the most important thing about universities."

Gradually it will mean that the universities will get filled up with people whose strongest recommendation is that they are Canadian."

The faculty letter said work towards teaching and research excellence and encouraging students to remain at UBC for a graduate programs, is "frustrated if nationality becomes a significant 'qualification'."

Gertler: "Trudeau pays lip service to disarmament"

by Marjorie Tyroler

Ann Gertler, observer at the United Nations for Project Ploughshares, a pan-Canadian disarmament group, addressed a crowd of about 30 people at McGill Thursday night.

Speaking on "Canada and the U.N. Special Session on Disarmament," Gertler discussed Canada's role in the disarmament negotiations, and the upcoming U.N. Special Session on that topic.

According to Gertler, the success of the session will depend on three things occurring prior to it: the reversal of the NATO decision to plant cruise and Pershing II missiles in Europe in December; the convening of a European disarmament congress; and the signing of a test ban treaty by the two superpowers.

Gertler criticized Canadian and American policies on disarmament. She accused the U.S. of blocking the timetable for disarmament with the help of Canada. Gertler said that "Trudeau only pays lip service to disarmament" and that although the Canadian government is officially committed to disarmament it supports it only half-heartedly.

Components for nuclear weapons are made in Canada, and CANDU and uranium exports often are not used for the peaceful purposes they are intended, Gertler said.

"My own view is Canada needs to develop a better perception of what kind of place it really is," said Gertler. "Our situation is similar to that of Finland and Austria. Our interests should be closer to theirs and not that of our neighbor to the south."

Urging a review of Canadian NATO policy, she said, "Canada should announce now that in certain situations, such as a war in the Middle East, she would not participate in NATO alliances and declare herself neutral."

Gertler also recommended that local governments declare their towns or cities nuclear-free zones.

"There's a hell of a lot of missiles already in Europe. You can't just try to stop the new ones or the neutron bomb from going in, you've got to stop the whole show," she said.

McGill Redmen 7, OQIFC 0

by Paul Balfour

Lennoxville — Well, they did it. A last minute touchdown by Luc Menard from 24 yards out gave the McGill Redmen a 21-14 victory over the Bishop's Gaiters. The Redmen have now finished regular season play with an impressive seven wins, no ties, no losses, the best the team has done since 1973.

They nearly didn't though. "I told our guys that the McGill defence is really good," said Bishop's head coach Bruce Coulter. "But I also told them that their offence wasn't that good and that if we could hold them to fourteen points, we could win. We nearly did."

In the first quarter neither offence could get anything going, due to the superb play of the two defences. Greg Ashley, combatting very slippery field conditions despite the warm weather, missed two field goals. Both were from 'thirty-seven yards out, well within his range, but McGill had to settle for a pair of singles.

McGill got a big break late in the first quarter. Marc Durand, having one of his worst outings of the season, launched a pass deep Gaiter territory, intended for Tim Heron. Pass interference was called on Bishop's and the Redmen ended first and goal on the one yard line. You guessed it, big Charlie Gress fought his way into the endzone for the major. Greg Ashley's convert was good, giving the Redmen a 9-0 lead.

The Gaiters began to look threatening in the second quarter. "We knew we couldn't run against McGill, but we thought we might be able to pass and we could," explained Coulter. Indeed the injury-plagued Gaiters picked up 186 yards passing against McGill.

That may not sound like much but if used effectively, could be and nearly was, lethal. For example one of those passes by Bishop's QB Peter Knee was a beautiful forty-two yarder to Steve Lalonde. There was no one between Lalonde and the endzone and if not for a shoestring tackle by defensive back Mike Doherty, the Gaiters would have put an easy six on the board.

The Gaiters had to settle for a try at a field but the ball struck an upright, giving McGill possession at their own ten. Again the McGill offence was unable to get anything going and Remi Kawkabani ended up punting from inside his own endzone. It was a magnificent punt but Bishop's Mark Fabri, who's been doing this sort of thing all year long, returned the ball an exciting thirty-five yards to put the Gaiters in scoring range again. This time they connected. Two sharp passes by Knee and a Coulter-patented-reverse gave the Gaiters first and goal on McGill's one yard line. Fullback Doug McNeven imitated Charlie Gress for the major and Drew Lyon's convert was good.

"We just didn't play well," said McGill's head coach Charlie Baillie of the first half. "Their defensive line and linebackers were playing well and we got rattled and lost a bit of our confidence."

With Dean Gibson at the Redmen helm, McGill looked a little better in the second half. Greg Ashley kicked a twenty-five yard field goal and shortly thereafter picked up another single when he was wide from thirty-five yards out. If anybody saved the day it was punter Remi Kawkabani. Kawkabani had over 450 yards in punting, averaging 45.6 yards a hoof, and picking up one single on a booming fifty-four yard kick.

Early in the fourth quarter it happened. Knee went long again to Steve Lalonde. Lalonde cleanly beat Colin Woon Sam and went into the endzone for the major. Drew Lyon's convert tied the game at fourteen all.

From then on the game was a real cliffhanger and football was played the way it was meant to be. The play was back and forth, each offence trying desperately to break the stalemate and the defences making them fight for every inch.

Each team had one tense moment. McGill's came when Gaiter punter Tom Schreider rocketed the ball into the McGill endzone. Mick Mauravich battled his way out to the one-yard line to avoid giving up the single. Not to be outdone by anybody, Kawkabani responded on the next series with a similar punt. This time it was Mark Fabri's turn to narrowly avoid giving up what might have been the deciding point.

Fabri's return put Bishop's on their own five where they ended up punting from moments later. With less than two minutes remaining in the game, Rick Biewald returned the ball fifteen yards. Then Luc Menard broke through on an off-tackle from twenty-four yards out for McGill's go-ahead TD. Ashley added the convert and time ran out on the Gaiters.

The Redmen defense deserves its customary pat on the back. They allowed Bishop's to run for a measly thirty-one yards, had two quarterback sacks, and four interceptions, Vince Colizza and Mike Doherty each grabbing a pair.

Patriotes beat our Puch

by Elise Goldberg

February 16, 1980. Does that date mean anything to you? Well besides being this reporter's birthday, there is some significance to that date pertaining to the Redmen hockey team. That was the last time the Redmen were shut out in league competition. That was, until last Friday night, October 30. On that evening the Redmen were shut out 8-0 by les Patriotes of UQTR in Trois Rivières.

But was it a similar game to the one played two seasons ago? How could it have been? Only four players from that team remain with the Redmen team this year. But it's a game that I'm sure every one would rather forget. Especially goalie Larry Rush who was the goalie of record for both these games.

But actually, the game started off as if it were going to be close. The game remained scoreless until 14:41 of the first period. That's when the dreaded François Bellerose's slapshot from the point caught Rush by surprise. Rush unfortunately would see more of Bellerose later.

Three minutes after Bellerose's goal forward André Carlos scored his first of two goals on a breakaway. This goal was shorthanded. A minute later, at 18:49, Carlos struck again. This time it was on the powerplay, as some rough battling went on in front of the Redmen net. That ended the scoring for the first period, and it was hoped that the Redmen would get their act together in time for the second period.

But such was not the case. François Bellerose dominated the second period scoring as he scored both UQTR goals for that period. That completed Bellerose's hat trick for the evening. Bellerose, the QUAA's second leading scorer last season, also had an assist. His three goal performance was not something new to the Redmen.

Quite frankly, the Redmen did not play well at all. The defense wasn't breaking up the plays, the offense wasn't connecting its passes, they weren't taking enough

Wie geht's mit dem Playoffs?

by Paul Balfour

This really isn't as complicated as it sounds. Because Ottawa beat Queen's, and Bishop's lost their game, the Gaiters have been eliminated from post season play. What it boils down to is that next Saturday McGill will meet fourth place Ottawa here and third place Concordia will travel to Kingston to play the second place Gaels. The two winners will meet after that to decide the OQIFC championship.

The winner of that game, presumably McGill, travels to Halifax to meet the top team from the Atlantic conference, probably the Acadia Axemen.

At the same time, the top Ontario conference team meets the top team from the Western conference. The winner of those two games meet in the College Bowl in Toronto.

My sources report that Acadia will be a pushover for McGill. They also tell me to beware of the University of Western Ontario Mustangs who, I'm told, could be the best college team in Canada, gulp, ever. It seems pretty safe to predict that Western will meet McGill in the College Bowl and the Redmen defense will be put to the ultimate test to prove that they are indeed the best in the country.

Sidelines

"If I had a choice," said Charlie Baillie before the out-of-town scores were in, "I'd rather not play Ottawa in the playoffs. They're a very tough team." Should be a good game then, folks... And remember, if you are in the stands for that game and McGill wins, you'll receive a free-dinner from La Spaghetterie in Old Montreal... Last week you may have read about Defensive Secondary coach Brian Acton, wife Nancy, and two-year old football expert, Beth. Met Nancy's younger sister, Sue, at Bishop's. "I'm taking Business at Bishop's but my heart's with the Redmen," she said. Sue, let it be known, was the one to introduce Mr. Acton to Miss Macaulay. Her ambition? To be the first female head coach of a college football team of course. What a family... Bruce Coulter, the Gaiter head coach, is not only arguably the best college football coach in Canada, (some say North America) but a fine sportsman as well. When he heard that Ottawa had upset Queen's and thus eliminated the Gaiters from further play, he took it with a lot of style. He also said that he wanted to wish McGill all the luck in the world. "If anybody deserved to win the conference, they do. I'd really like to see them go all the way. It's about time a Quebec team did." Coulter has earned the well deserved respect of both players and parents. Mark Fabri's dad has only missed one of Bishop's home games in four years. He lives in Ottawa. "I don't care that we lost," said a misty-eyed four-year veteran of the reception after the game when the word got around. "I wouldn't have traded playing under Bruce Coulter for being on four College Bowl teams." Mr. Fabri, also visually emotional, pointed out that "a coach who could make a contending team from a school of 850 people and compete with schools like McGill who have 15,000, that's some coach." He certainly is.

Martlets finish 4th - OWIAA

by Sandra Clark

In the final weekend of intercollegiate field hockey play, the McGill Martlets bowed to Guelph for third place in overtime. Losing all but one game in the York University Round Robin, McGill is in fourth position going into the OWIAA finals.

Their game against Waterloo, a team which lacks in defensive skills, gave the Martlets a 3-0 victory. Of the three goals scored, provincial player Michelle Gagnon contributed two, with teammate Kathy Cotter scoring the third.

Martlet coach Jan Meyer praised the quality of play and emphasized that the controlled style and tight defense produced a "fairly good game".

In their meeting with York, the Martlets lost 4-1. Although strong offensively in the first half, with Kim Kaperski scoring minutes into the first half, the Martlets were no match for York.

Despite the loss, McGill and Guelph were tied for third place in their tier of Ontario conference play. A short replay third and fourth positions resulted.

During the first fifteen minutes of overtime both teams had chances yet neither team could score. A seven and a half minute sudden death overtime followed, with a tight defensive struggle but still no score. A second set of penalty strokes finally led to a narrow 2-1 victory for Guelph and unfortunately a fourth place position for the Martlets.

The Martlets were unable to control the ball, which loosened the defense considerably. Gagnon again scored two goals while

sters, 8 — 0

shots on net. Need I continue? They seemed to be too busy trying to set up elaborate plays instead of concentrating on the basics, where their problems were rooted.

That is not to say that no one played well. Forward Tim Bossy turned in a consistent effort, as usual. Pat Chiasson's intensity was felt by Trois Rivières especially along the boards and with his skating. Also, rookie forward Eric Smith played a solid game.

McGill had a great deal of trouble capitalizing on their powerplay opportunities. They had six of these chances and could not as the final score tells connect on any of them. It was hard to tell the McGill even had the one man advantage. Trois Rivières, on the other hand, scored on four of their five powerplay opportunities.

Enough said, the Redmen will have a chance to release some of their vengeance this Wednesday at the International University Cup Tournament. They play UQTR in the first round of play at that tournament.
